Republicans Enjoy Barbecue and Talks At Brook's Farm

Thousands of political pilgrims braved the hot weather last Saturday and wended their way to the annual Republican Editorial Association of the 12th dist., picnic held on the 370 acre farm of C. Wayland Brooks, 12 miles northeast of Ottawa, Ill.

As cars began to stream across the fields to park in Brook's meadows, Frank Greenaway, president of the editorial group, announced that the steaming barbecue pits were roasting beef enough to feed the great hungry throng. In addition to the delicious barbecued beef with all the trimmings, roasted ear corn, tomatoes, coffee and soft drinks were served.

From early morning on until noon and after, Republicans wended their way across fields of grain and alfalfa on the Brook's farm toward the barbecue pits, tents and tables where the noon-day meal was being prepared. Many of the guests wandered over the farm, looking over the Senatorial nominee's horses and black Aberdeen Angus cattle.

Following the sumptuous meal, a band concert was enjoyed, followed by a community sing, the new Willie campaign song: "We Will Win With Willie" to the tune of "Roll Out the Barrel" was the favorite tune.

Later in the afternoon speech-making was in order from a platform on the grounds. A loud speaker system carried the speeches to all parts of the woodland along the Fox river.

Dwight H. Green, G. O. P. candidate for Governor in his address stated that in the hands of the free press is the safe guarding of American democracy. He declared that the American people will not be frightened by the perils of foreign affairs into sacrificing their liberties and traditions. The freedom of the press is the protection of the citizen against the tyranny of government.

He pointed out that Freedom of the press has gone from France, for generations a cradle of human liberty. It has gone from England where it long was nurtured and preserved. Our nation alone has the light of knowledge and the press undimmed. He further emphasized the fact that the press has a duty to perform in bringing the message of freedom to all the people.

Another salient point brought out during the course of the speeches was that Franklin Roosevelt was not drafted for a third term by the people, but only by the politicians and that the only time a candidate can be drafted by the people is at the ballot box.

A sudden thunder and rain storm cut the speech making short, but after a brief drizzle of rain the sun peeked out from behind the clouds and the speechmaking was resumed.

Mr. Brooks who is the Republican nominee for U. S. Senator said in part:

"I'm sorry you're getting wet, but I'm glad about the change in the weather, because you can see the land needs this rain. Through this farm I have learned the problems of agriculture in the raw."

"This is marginal land. Water rushing to the river has washed away the top soil. But because of what I've put back into it, last year we had the largest yield of oats per acre in this area with one exception."

"The government must encourage soil conservation without dictating the lives of farmers. They will do their duty without being regimented. "Many of my friends are farmers. I know there is no more patriotic citizen than the American son of the soil. And I realize that the farmer plays a basic role in building our national defense."

"Willie will build the United States into a nation capable of holding its own against the world," said Brooks, who won decorations for valor in the World War. "We will not have a great armament until we restore strong private enterprise. Then the dictators of the world will speak softly when they speak to the United States. Then we will back up our words with action instead of doing a lot of loud talking and waving a cream puff as is being done now."

Others on the speakers platform were: Hugh W. Cross, G. O. P. nominee for lieutenant governor; Justus L. Johnson, nominee for secretary of state; Arthur C. Lueder, candidate for public auditor; Warren Wright, treasurer nominee; George F. Barrett, candidate for attorney general; Stephen A. Day and Wm. G. Stratton, standard bearers for Congressman-at-large; Mrs. Bertha Bauer, Republican national committee woman; State chairman Ben L. Berve, Cook County chairman, John T. Dempsey and Clement A. Nance, secretary of the state central committee.

Guests at this picnic consumed 3,000 pounds of beef, 6,000 ears of corn, 20 bushels of tomatoes and several hundred gallons of coffee and soft drinks.

Will county was well represented at this gathering, among those at-

Old Chief Moke is preening his feathered head dress and is getting his regalia in shape for his appearance at the Mokena Annual Home Coming to be held the 13, 14 and 15th of September. It is over 100 years since the Indians left this section of the country and Old Chief Moke will find a great change in his former habitat.

The chief has taken on a decided growth in stature during his long absence from his former stamping ground. Yes sir, he has grown almost ten feet tall. He will be the center of attraction on the Home Coming grounds. At night his eyes will flash light and his voice will be heard for blocks. Be sure to see the old boy in action. Mokena derived its name from this grand old Indian.

Subterranean Wonders Hidden for Ages Discovered by Guides at Mammoth Cave

By JOHN MAC DONALD

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

THE eyes of scientists and sightseers the nation over have been turned toward Mammoth Cave, Kentucky. For there the National Park service has just announced the discovery of a far-flung network of galleries, avenues, streams, subterranean gardens and geological formations that for countless centuries have lain hidden from the eyes of man.

The new discovery is said by park authorities to be the greatest find since Mammoth Cave itself was first entered by pioneers in 1799.

News of the first penetration of the hidden labyrinth of limestone caverns has been a closely guarded secret, known only by a few cave guides and officials and park service employees. On October 10, 1938, four excited cave explorers, exhausted and coated with mud, came up out of the depths to report that they had just gone "through Purgatory to Paradise."

The four discoverers were Carl Hanson, his son Pete, Leo Hunt and his cousin, Claude Hunt. Their find developed out of an expedition up the black recesses of Roaring river under Lee Ridge to catch eyeless fish for display.

Years of Search.

For 20 years explorers had sought in vain to get beneath Lee Ridge. Because of its proximity to Mammoth Cave ridge and its similarity in size and topography, they were certain that beneath it lay a network of channels like those of Mammoth cave.

Years of disappointment in this search made the guides cautious about announcing their find. They confided first only in Martin L. Charlet, cave manager, a veteran of nearly 40 years' experience at Mammoth cave.

Their complete story, revealed for the first time, is an amazing account of hardship, of underground rivers which threatened to trap them hundreds of feet underground, of tortuous crawling, stooping and twisting through narrow crevices, past gaping pits, into towering domes and finally of stumbling into a yawning cavern which stretches for miles into a new world never before trod by the footsteps of man.

Since then park and cave officials and engineers have followed the twisting trail of the four explorers. For months every main avenue in the new discovery has been explored, surveyed and checked by these men, who today verify it as the greatest find at Mammoth cave in 140 years.

Above, a view of one of the passageways in the vast, newly-discovered network of caverns, domes, avenues and pits found by guides at Mammoth Cave, Ky. Said to be the greatest find since the discovery of the cave itself in 1799, this subterranean wonderland has lain for ages unseen by man. Below, across a crystal and sand "carpet" hitherto untrodden by man, the explorer plods his way, figuratively leaving his footsteps on the "Sands of Time."

While public showing of the new treasures unearthed by the discovery will be a comparatively simple matter, it has been determined to "make haste slowly" in preparing the new scenic wonderland for sightseers' eyes, according to R. Taylor Hoskins, acting superintendent of Mammoth Cave National park.

It will probably be about two years before the work is completed. This, he says, is because of the intricate engineering problems and development of protective devices. Before a single shot of dynamite was fired at the site of the proposed work entrance, observations were made above and below the surface to detect any possibility of disturbance to any of the delicate formations from concussion. The construction of trails, entrances, exits, placement of lights, and scores of other matters that contribute to the safety and comfort of visitors must require care and patience, Mr. Hoskins says.

Gypsum Paradise.

The guides who made the discovery consider its outstanding spectacle to be the great profusion of gypsum found in one section which they have called Paradise, and another which they identify as Little Paradise. Here for hundreds of feet one may walk through a garden of gypsum flowers that decorate walls, ceiling and floor. Great bursts of gypsum simulating every floral pattern found in nature hang in clusters of buds and rosettes, some with petals 18 inches long.

Mineral deposits on some of the crystalline gypsum blend into a variety of pastel colors to create the effect of a fairy castle built of candy. One grotto covered with formations like rock candy, pink honeycomb, peppermint stick and taffy, particularly appealed to the discoverers who call it the Candy Kitchen.

Snowball Formation.

In one section of the cave white ovals of gypsum cling to the walls like hundreds of snowballs, while others, forced off by the thrust of new crystals forming underneath, clutter the cave floor.

Flaked gypsum covers part of the cave like a white sheet. Here and there it has peeled back into folds and curves, creating patterns of every description. Thin banded lines in a variety of colors are etched into the white background.

Crystal gypsum on the floor of the cave, mixed with red sand, makes the walk-way sparkle like a jeweled carpet. Sand banks for hundreds of feet are covered with crusted gypsum like a snow drift caked by a hard wind. Below this crust is the pepper-red sand.

Three Main Avenues.

Three main avenues constitute the major part of the newly found cave network, though dozens of smaller channels spread fan-wise in every direction.

Largest of the three, which the guides call simply Big avenue, extends fully 7,000 feet. It is unequaled by anything previously known, being comparable only to the great Broadway avenue of Mammoth cave, except that it is more evenly cut, in straighter lines, and holds to its vast dimensions more consistently. Throughout its length it maintains an average width of 50 feet and a height of 30 to 35 feet.

Walls and ceiling for hundreds of feet in Big avenue are glistening white with flaked gypsum or studded with gypsum crystals. Frequently the ceiling has been water-cut in the shape of great capitol domes, rotundas or cones; the creamy-white limestone fringed with a web-like tracery in red, rust, black or brown.

Fossil avenue, so called by guides because masses of crustaceans are imbedded in its walls, is distinctive for the uniformity of its carving and coloring. It runs for nearly a mile at right angles to Big avenue. A thin layer of sparkling gypsum gives this limestone channel the appearance of a white-washed tunnel.

Another link in the network is tentatively called "Onyx" avenue because of its stalactite and stalagmite formations. Although only about 1,200 feet long, 12 feet high, and 15 feet long, it is in many respects the most beautiful cave in the new discovery.

Here at one time swirling currents of water etched out intricate patterns in the chalk-white limestone to leave an endless array of grotesque contorted shapes. The bed of a pond here is encrusted with simulated cave pearls.

Of the travertine formations, the most unusual is a solid rimstone wall, 42 feet long and 4 feet high. It forms a natural dam across one large avenue where for centuries it had held back an underground lake.

The former water bed rises up in a series of crystallized terraces to another strange formation called the Mushroom, though it looks more like an inverted cocktail glass of gigantic proportions. A five-foot red stalagmite stem hangs 15 feet from a dome. Near the floor the stem is attached to a bowl-like stalagmite, 40 feet in circumference—one of the largest of its kind anywhere.

The area below the bowl was once filled with water, and now the entire stone mass seems suspended from the ceiling.

Depth of Ocean

According to the U. S. coast and geodetic survey, the average depth of the ocean is 12,450 feet below sea level. The deepest place yet found is off the island of Mindanao in the Philippines, where a sounding of 35,400 feet has been reported.

Single Factor Seldom Causes Auto Accident, Expert Reveals

By EDWARD DUNCAN

BRAKES shrieked. The car skidded dizzily, then left the pavement to hurtle against a tree. Not long before, its driver had taken a few drinks and stepped out into the rain to race for home. He was driving all right until he failed to make that curve.

Newspaper stories of the accident would probably attribute the driver's death to "driving while drunk." But enforcement officials and highway engineers who must work to prevent such accidents regret that the explanation isn't as simple as that.

"An automobile accident is a lot like a winning poker hand—or a losing one," according to J. Stannard Baker, traffic safety consultant with the National Safety council.

"Suppose you're sitting in a game and draw a straight flush. You win the pot. Did any one card contribute more to the winning hand than the rest? Of course not. It took all five cards to complete the flush."

"The same test should be applied to a traffic accident," Baker explained. "Darkness, rain, intoxication, a curve—if any one of these circumstances had not been present, the accident probably would not have happened."

This fundamental analysis will be one of those presented by Baker in the course he is teaching at the National Institute for Traffic Safety Training at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville from August 12 to 24. The course will be one of nine to be taught at the institute by the nation's outstanding traffic authorities.

"Now let's look at our sample accident again," said Mr. Baker. "The circumstances—darkness, rain, intoxication and a curve—are familiar. It is possible, even probable, that the darkness, rain, the curve or the car's speed had as much to do with the accident as the driver's degree of intoxication."

"If we keep statistics on that same curve for a year, we may find that 20 drivers missed it and piled up in accidents, and that of the 20, only 4 had been drinking."

"So we put a safety engineer to work on the curve. He studies all the statistics on the accidents that have occurred."

"Perhaps the curve will be straightened out a little, or obstructions to the view may be removed. Possibly the engineer finds that the crown in the surface around the curve gives a reverse bank which throws into a ditch any car taking the curve at more than 45 miles per hour on the right half of the road. This is changed."

"The following year we find that only five drivers missed the curve, and that four of these had been drinking. The number of drivers who can't negotiate it safely has been reduced to a minimum—to those who are grossly careless or quite drunk."

"It is true," said Mr. Baker, "that one factor alone seldom causes an accident. But it is equally true that if any single factor which contributes to motor vehicle accidents can be called a joker or wild card in our poker game analogy, it is intoxication."

"The car and the highway can be improved for the safety of sober drivers, but when a joker or wild card is introduced in the form of a drinking driver, things can go wrong anywhere any time."

THE WORKS AND THE WORD OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer.—Psalm 19:14.

Consistently beautiful and beautifully consistent is the revelation of God, whether it be in the glory of His works, in the perfection of His Word, or in His gracious dealings with man. The spiritually minded man sees God in all of His works, whereas the blind materialist sees only matter and natural laws which he may use or abuse. He makes of God's creation things for his own comfort or for the destruction of his fellow men, not recognizing "the Creator, who is blessed forever." This is a serious matter, for in so doing the unbeliever has "changed the truth of God into a lie" (read Rom. 1:20-25).

The psalmist here presents God as He is revealed in nature, in His Word, and in the heart of man.

I. God's Glory Revealed in Nature (vv. 1-6).

"The heavens declare the glory of God." The sun in all its glory and power and the starry stillness of the night all "utter forth a glorious voice," as Joseph Addison expresses it:

"Forever singing, as they shine,
The hand that made us is divine."

Nature speaks eloquently of God without saying a single word. The eye, the mind, and the heart of men may see in and know from nature alone the "eternal power and God-head; so that they are without excuse" (Rom. 1:20). "No man living beneath the copes of heaven dwells beyond the bounds of God's court preachers."

Those who do not hear or heed these voices, whether their ears "are stopped with the clay of earthly tastes and occupations, or stuffed with scientific wadding of the most modern kind" (MacLaren), are described by Paul as having their foolish heart darkened: "Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools" (Rom. 1:21, 22).

Nature gives only a limited revelation of God, showing His existence, power and wisdom; but to really know Him we must see

II. God's Perfection Revealed in His Word (vv. 7-11).

Nowhere in the book of nature is it written that God is a Redeemer, a cleanser from sin, a restorer of the soul. That truth is found only in His Word—the Bible. What folly then for sinful men who need redemption to see God only in nature, but never look into His Word or go to church that they may hear His truth proclaimed. The final and perfect revelation of God is in His Son, Jesus Christ, the Redeemer. The psalmist with the eye of faith saw the perfection of God revealed in His law. We are privileged to know the Son of God who came not "to destroy the law . . . but to fulfill."

Note the beautiful symmetry of verses 7-9:

Law	perfect . . .	restoring (R.V.)
Testimony	sure	making wise
Statutes	right	rejoicing
Commandment	pure	enlightening
Fear	clean	enduring
Judgments	true	altogether righteous

Little wonder that the psalmist says that the words of God are sweeter than honey, more precious than gold, and worthy to be heeded and kept. The great reward of thus knowing God's Word is that we may learn of

III. God's Grace Revealed in the Heart of Man (vv. 12-14).

Man is a sinner; sometimes he sins unwittingly and ignorantly; sometimes deliberately and in presumption; and sometimes both. What shall he do with his sin? The psalmist says to bring it to God in repentance and prayer for cleansing. We may add to his invitation the admonition to come for cleansing in the blood of Christ.

"Come to this fountain, so rich and sweet;
Cast thy poor soul at the Saviour's feet;
Plunge in today, and be made complete;
Glory to His name!"

God's grace not only cleanses—it keeps us. He is able and willing to make not only the words of our mouth, but the very meditation of our hearts acceptable in His sight. That means holy living. There is nothing more needed in our day than a revival of Christian living in the daily responsibilities of life. Personal purity of heart and motive, recognition of God's Word in thought and life—these things will make the believer "upright" (v. 13) and reflect honor and glory on the Lord who is our "strength" (R. V. "rock") "and redeemer" (v. 14).

Principle Holds Good

Except a man become like a little child, we are told, he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven. This principle holds good in other kingdoms as well. Unless we become as humble as a child and are willing to be taught we cannot enter into the kingdom of music, or art, or knowledge, or scientific agriculture.

ATTENDS GARDEN TOUR

Mrs. Wallace Combs attended the Home and Garden tour given by the Garden Club of Barrington in honor of their 15th anniversary. It was gorgeous in every detail. No indication of the dry and hot weather as guests wandered leisurely across the lawns and thru the radiant flower gardens dressed in the delicate shades of summer fabrics.

Rainbow Farm was particularly attractive with swans floating haughtily on the lake close to the woods where thousands of pheasants and other game find sanctuary. Gardens and homes were visited. Fruit punch was served on the terrace of the "Meadows" under spreading trees adjacent to the sunken gardens with pyramidal pines as a background and an array of flowering plants to the fore. The interior of the Hecht Jr., home is as dramatic in color schemes and arrangements as their beautiful garden. Mes. Klingler, Schultz and McClure of Chicago Heights Garden Club were among those in Mrs. Combs' party.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 4.

The Golden Text was, "O God, thou art my God . . . Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee" (Psalms 63:1, 3).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, 'What will ye that I shall do unto you? They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened. So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes; and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him" (Matthew 20:30, 32-34).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine Love, which made harmless the poisonous viper, which delivered men from the boiling oil, from the fiery furnace, from the jaws of the lion, can heal the sick in every age and triumph over sin and death. It crowned the demonstrations of Jesus with unsurpassed power and love" (p. 243).

Weird Fight of Blind Ants and Negroes Is Told

Insect Army Acts as Unit; Crave Raw Flesh, Dead or Alive.

WASHINGTON.—A weird, fierce battle in the sultry blackness of a jungle night between an army of 100,000 of big, black ants and a heroic squad of Negro boys, some of whom were painfully injured, is described by Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological park of the Smithsonian institution, in a radiogram just received here from Liberia.

Dr. Mann is leading the Smithsonian-Firestone expedition into the Liberian back country, in search of rare animals, birds and reptiles for the national collection.

The battle in the forest depths might well be a preliminary to the eventual life-and-death struggle between man and insect for mastery of the planet, as predicted by some philosophers. The expedition had fixed its camp for the night, Dr. Mann says.

Ants Strike in Formation.

Almost without warning out of the blackness came the invaders. There were myriads of individuals in the advancing columns, black as the night itself. They came in perfect order, like regiment after regiment of black-uniformed troops, but their alignment and discipline was far nearer perfection than ever is attained by any army of men.

The sentries knew the nature of the attack. Such assaults are not uncommon in the Liberian back country and man has, as a rule, one perfect defense against them. He can run away from the slow-moving, precisely controlled column. Such a force will occasionally descend upon a house and is sometimes welcomed. The human occupants can leave while the ants drive out the mice, rats, lizards and other pests. Finally the invading ants can be destroyed with boiling water.

But no such way was open to Dr. Mann's sentries. The camp was of a type that must not be abandoned. They stood their ground. The fierce, biting and stinging insects swarmed all over them, up the legs of their trousers, under their shirts, over their faces. They came in seemingly unending files. While details of the struggle are lacking in Dr. Mann's brief cable, he says that some of the boys were very badly bitten and stung.

Huns of Insect World.

It was an army of driver ants, similar in many respects to the legionary ants of South America, but even more vicious. They are, say Smithsonian entomologists, the Huns of the insect world. Very little is actually known about them. An army consists of hundreds of thousands of individuals. Among them are some of the largest of all ants. The males are approximately two inches in length and the queens slightly less. They, however, are harmless. The fighters are the workers, ranging from the vicious, flesh-tearing soldiers nearly an inch in length to less vicious and smaller forms with all sorts of duties.

An attack by one of these armies seems to be directed by an uncanny intelligence. So far as known, there is no single directing brain. The whole army moves as if it were a single organism, every movement apparently perfectly co-ordinated.

They have an insatiable appetite for raw flesh, living or dead. They cannot endure, so far as is known, the rays of the sun. Hence their operations are always in darkness, or on very cloudy days.

Youth, Clothes Burning, Sets Fire to the Woods

ROLLA, MO.—Harold Heflin, 19, suffered only a slightly burned hand when his truck caught fire on the highway near here, but he gave forest service rangers a busy time for several hours.

Heflin became excited when his clothes caught fire from the truck and ran into the woods. Friends beat out the fire on his clothes without serious damage to Heflin, but the flames ignited the woods and several acres were burned.

Six Knocks, Six Dollars, Transcontinental Mystery

JEROME, IDAHO.—Six knocks and $6.

April 24, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Glodowski were awakened by six peculiar, rhythmic knocks that seemed to come from the wall.

April 30, Glodowski received an envelope mailed in New York city with no return address. Inside were $6, nothing else.

The envelope was postmarked April 24, the same night the six knocks were heard.

Hunter So Inquisitive He's Chased by a Bear

STAR CITY, SASK.—Next time George Young goes hunting, he won't be so inquisitive when he sees steam issuing from a snowbank.

A large black bear ambled out of the snowdrift when Young, determined to find the source of the steam, probed it with a long stick.

With the bear on his heels, Young called to his friends, who dropped it with a shotgun charge.

It's Picnic Time

ARE you tied to the kitchen, these pleasant summer weekends, when your husband makes for the golf course and the youngsters dash off to the beach? You needn't be! It's picnic time, so just pack up your dinner and take it with you, to the yard, the seashore or the woods.

You can have an impromptu picnic of sandwiches, fruit, and something to drink—prepared from supplies on hand in pantry and refrigerator. Or with very few changes you can transform a Sunday dinner to a picnic meal.

If week-end plans call for an afternoon of swimming or golf, choose an oven dinner for your picnic menu. Just put the dinner in the oven of your modern electric range, set the automatic timer to turn the current on and off at the desired time, and forget about it until it's time to pack the lunch.

This Topsy-Turvy Ham Loaf is an excellent choice for a summer meal. Serve it hot or cold—with scalloped potatoes or potato salad, if you prefer it.

Topsy-Turvy Ham Loaf

½ pound lean pork (ground)
½ pound smoked ham (ground)
½ pound beef (ground)
2 cups bread crumbs
1 egg (well beaten)
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

3 tablespoons butter (melted)
¼ cup brown sugar
3 slices canned pineapple
3 red maraschino cherries

Combine the meats, crumbs, egg, milk, and seasonings. Mix well. Pour melted butter into a bread loaf pan. Arrange pineapple slices in the bottom, with a cherry in the center of each. Sprinkle with brown sugar. Pack the meat mixture into the pan and bake in a moderately hot oven, with the electric thermostat set at 375° for about 1 hour.

When you plan a picnic, take along a wire corn popper for roasting frankfurters. You can roast half a dozen at once, with no fear of any of them meeting a cindery end, and you can top off the meal with plenty of hot, buttery popcorn.

Include medium-sized heads of lettuce in your picnic lunch. When ready to eat, cut in quarters. The lettuce is most refreshing, and a good thirst quencher.

One hot dish is recommended for any picnic; it might be baked beans, a delicious stew or chowder, cooked in the deep well cooker of your modern electric range. Carry the cooker (hot food and all!) in a cardboard carton, well packed with newspapers to retain the heat.

For a delicious and unusual sandwich filling, grind together 1 pound of American Cheese and ¼ pound dried beef. Moisten with 1 cup of condensed tomato soup.

See Board of Appeals Says Toman

With the penalty date for the payment of the second installment of the 1939 taxes only 30 days off, County Treasurer John Toman urges all taxpayers who appeared before the Board of Appeals in protest of their taxes to go back to that board now and learn if their protest was allowed and what reduction in taxes was granted.

Toman says he will then issue a new bill for the second installment showing the deduction—the amount to be paid. Under the law, Toman says, he cannot refund money after a bill has been paid and if taxpayers who protested should pay their second installment before Sept. 1, and then come in for a reduction allowed by the Board of Appeals, they will be out of luck.

Treasurer Toman says this action does not come under his jurisdiction but in justice to the taxpayers, he wishes to inform them of this condition so that he or she will have 30 days in which to learn whether their protests have been allowed and whether they will have a saving on their second installment.

View On Conscription

Charges that conscription in peace time is a step toward regimentation were made by Pearl M. Hart, prominent Chicago attorney, executive secretary of the People's Federation for Peace organized to defend America by keeping out of war, local offices at 203 North Wabash, Chicago.

Miss Hart said: "The vast majority of loyal Americans are opposed to war, and favor adequate defense. We are not at war. Conscription in peace time is taking another page out of totalitarian texts for the regimentation of the individual."

"Democracy is undermined most effectively by the subtle means of first inspiring fear, and then taking away piece-meal the rights of citizens on the specious ground that personal liberties must be subordinated to national defense."

"True national defense consists in the utmost protection of civil rights in better housing and a national health program, in free education for all who want it, in jobs for the young, security for the weak and the aged, the elimination of child labor, and a square deal for all labor."

"When a government has seriously and adequately applied itself to the solution of these problems, conscription will not be necessary on the part of those governed."

The People's Federation for Peace whose officers are: Harvey O'Connor, Chairman, Pearl Hart, Executive Secretary, Dr. P. Gaberman, Treasurer, was organized following the peace conference held in the LaSalle Hotel, June 29th when delegates from church organizations, trade unions, youth groups, clubs and fraternal organizations acted to form a permanent peace federation.

Six sections embracing the state of Illinois have been organized to participate in the second peace conference to be held August 10th in the Sherman Hotel and the national Emergency Peace Mobilization to be held in Chicago August 31st, Sept.

1st and 2nd at the Chicago Stadium.

Eleven peace committees have been organized in Chicago with active groups functioning in the suburbs of Oak Park, Evanston and Highland Park.

One mobile puppet unit presented the first of a series of peace puppet shows in downstate Illinois, August 1st. Organizers from the People's Federation for Peace are active in Chicago and downstate, forming "Volunteers for Peace" groups.

Don't take my WORD for it!

FRANK COLBY

YE

Definite article: the.

When used as a definite article, as "Ye olde Antique Shoppe," this word should not be pronounced as it is spelled, "yee."

In Old and Middle English a character called "thorn" was used for the letters "t-h"; this greatly resembled the small "y." Later the character thorn was dropped from the alphabet and the small "y" was adopted in its place. The word "ye" therefore is simply an archaic way of writing "t-h-e."

(This does not apply to the pronoun ye, as "All ye who labor." It is correct to pronounce the pronoun as it is spelled.)

Correct pronunciation:

Definite article ye: thee

Pronoun, ye: yee

ORLAND PARK

by

Harold Morlock

It's been quite some time since yours truly has contributed any gossip to this column. After a nine month struggle with books and stuff Orland is a paradise.

Nothing small about our town either; we're going to have a paved street soon. Would someone please tell me if that Ray-Kriz path is still trodden. They're trying to get a roof on Orland's new gym before the cold weather sets in so work can be continued during the winter.

Have you heard the new "Babe in the Woods" Story? Seems that Lester Kinney was kept waiting in a forest preserve on a sneak date that didn't appear. There are more cars in town than ever before; also more dare-devil drivers. Remember when Joe Heim Used to be an Orland Boy? Is it Mokena or Lil?

The Palos Confectionary at 123rd and S. W. Hwy. is quite the gathering place for Orland lads- 2 to 1 the Palos lasses have plenty to do with it. Remember when Lucy Cooper used to pick her boy friends from Orland.

Which is worse, to have a steady job and no girl, or a steady girl and no job? Exclusive, I personally know a guy who knows a guy who is selling chances on a silk quilt for the Orland Fire Dept. Just phone 158-R a special switchboard operator will handle your order immediately. Only has 100 chances left; act now. Don't forget the Fireman's picnic Sunday at the lake.

The Robins swamped Matteson Tuesday night 19 to 2, and if Al can keep up the good work the boys promise to buy him a motor-bike and send him to Delavan every year.

The executive board of the Orland Park Woman's club held a special meeting in the Methodist church parlors last Thursday.

The program for the coming year was arranged and each department chairman has made a special effort in which to have an interesting program for her particular month.

One of the new features for this year will be a Woman's Chorus with Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, music chairman and Mrs. George Gee, director. The first rehearsal was held last Tuesday evening in the school auditorium.

Mrs. Harold Kinney, club chairman of the American Red Cross has received a bolt of material from the Red Cross to sew dresses for the refugee children abroad. Several members are assisting her with this work.

Receipts Return To Normal

Following last week's semi-famine runs of cattle and sheep, during which time supplies were of record-low volume for a period unaffected by abnormal shipping conditions, receipts early this week were of more normal dimensions. Short runs last week reversed the trend of rates in the forementioned classes and the country increased the marketward flow to take advantage of the appreciation.

The miniature runs of cattle and sheep resulted in comparatively small supplies of feeder cattle and lambs.

Demand for these classes, however, has been slack, due largely to earliness of the season for taking on replacements and also due to the uncertainty of quality and volume of the corn crop in some localities. Feeder cattle are selling about on a par with a year ago, while lambs are up 25c.

The main supporting prop under the livestock price structure during the past two weeks was the comparatively small kill. Compared with the corresponding time in 1939 slaughter is off as follows: Cattle, 18 percent; hogs, five percent; sheep and lambs, 14 percent. We are getting little export demand to help absorb supplies, but employment is increasing, tending to offset loss of the foreign trade.

Imports of meat also have been dwindling. Canned beef is about the only foreign meat product now being brought in, the movement from South America being less affected by the war. June imports of this class of meat were 36 percent less than a year ago, while the half year total shows a loss of six percent. Imports of beef cattle from Canada for 1940 to date are only 64,100 against 118,600 a year ago.

Republican Day At State Fair

Unable to secure Wendell L. Willkie, Republican candidate for president, as the principal speaker for Republican Day at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield on August 21, the committee in charge of arrangements have now turned their attention to perfecting plans for the day.

Two hundred thousand tickets are to be distributed among Illinois Republicans next week. The tickets will be placed in the mail on Aug. 15th to all county chairmen for distribution among the precinct committeemen in every precinct in the state.

Managers for Mr. Willkie's campaign for President felt that Republican Day at the Illinois State Fair followed too closely upon the date of Mr. Willkie's acceptance speech at Elwood, Indiana, to have him rushed into Illinois for a second important address. The campaign managers, however, did give Illinois Republican leaders assurances that Willkie would make a downstate speech, probably in Springfield, during September or early in October.

Thomas E. Dewey, New York's famous district attorney and Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, have been invited to address Republican Day at the fair, but whether they will be able to keep the engagement is, as yet, unknown.

All candidates on the Republican state ticket, headed by Dwight H. Green and C. Wayland Brooks, nominees for Governor and U. S. Senator will speak at the meeting.

State Senator Charles M. Thompson of Harrisburg, will be introduced by Timothy Swain, Peoria, president of the Young Republicans of Illinois.

H. L. Williamson, general chairman of the day, will introduce State Chairman Ben L. Berve, who in turn will introduce Swain.

From the requests being received at the Republican Day headquarters at the Abraham Lincoln hotel in Springfield, indications are that this year's rally at the State Fair will be one of the largest in the history of the event, managers say.

Candidate Enjoys Picnic Lunch

Dwight H. Green, Republican candidate for Governor, is shown as he enjoyed a picnic lunch served by ladies of the community at the Soldiers and Sailors Reunion last week in Salem. Mr. Green was given an enthusiastic reception at the reunion during which he sounded a campaign cry that there shall be no third-term dictatorship in America.

England Moves German Prisoners to Canada

The Germans have landed in Canada, as this photo shows. But they came as prisoners of war and not as conquerors. The above detachment are shown marching through train sheds in Quebec, on their way to Canadian prison camps. Canada was regarded as an extremely safe place for these prisoners because they are all specialists, including air pilots, parachutists and navy men. Originally imprisoned in England, they were moved to prevent danger during Hitler's attack on England.

They're Ready to Defend America's Coast

Manning coast defense guns will be one of the important military operations in the new defense program of the United States. Members of the 207th coast artillery of New York are shown receiving instructions in their duties. A number of regiments of the National Guard, particularly along the Atlantic seaboard, are being transformed into coast artillery units. They will be trained to repel attacks coming from either the sea or the air. Regular army coast defense units are likewise being expanded.

Walther League To Hold Convention

The Northern Illinois district, comprised of 221 societies, will be host or the 48th annual convention of the International Walther League August 25 thru 26, in the Stevens hotel, Edwin A. Kuecker, 7218 Prairie Ave., Chicago, general chairman, announces.

Transferred to Chicago from Ottawa, Canada, because of the war service demands upon the Canadian members, the convention is expected to attract more than 2,000 young Lutheran delegates from every section of the United States and from several foreign countries.

In addition to the regular business sessions, the program includes a choral union concert by a chorus of 1,000 voices Sunday night, August 25th in the Auditorium theatre; a talent quest with competitions in writing, drama, art, handicraft, and music, August 26; a banquet, August 27; a lake cruise and tour of the city, August 26 and lobby sings every evening.

The Walther League, one of the largest church lay organizations, is an international society of Lutheran young people within the Synodical Conference, one of the major Lutheran groups in America. Organized 47 years ago, the League is named after Dr. Carl F. W. Walther, founder of the conference's Missouri synod and the leading advocate at the time of organized youth activities within the church.

In the 2,500 societies, the League has about 100,000 members. It engages in various educational, missionary, and charitable enterprises, sponsoring for one project, the Evangelical Lutheran Sanatorium at Wheat Ridge, Colo. The national headquarters are located at 6438 Eggleston avenue, Chicago. A Golden Anniversary Fund will be launched at the convention, however, for the construction of a new $68,000 home on Chicago's near north side next spring.

In addition to Kuecker, there are 28 other members of the Northern Illinois district who are serving on the arrangements committee. Those from the South and Southwest of Chicago are:

Edward W. Jaeger, 4527 Greenwood; Ruth Holtz, 2726 South Kildare avenue; Eleonore Kammrath, 3829 South Damen avenue; Olga C. Boyer, 1442 East 59th St.; the Rev. Louis J. Schwartzkopf, 948 East Marquette road; George E. Merker, Jr., 1300 Schilling ave., Chicago Heights; Theodore E. Kissling, Jr., 507 East 60th st.; Clarence Homan, 6128 Kenwood ave.; Esther M. Kaspar, 5130 Dorchester ave.; and Don Lorenzen, 14625 Chicago street, Dolton.

The Northern Illinois district is divided into thirteen zones, whose presidents are also assisting in the preparations.

Cook County 4-H Group Attends Camp

A group of outstanding 4-H Club members of Cook County attended a State 4-H Camp at Lake Bloomington last week along with about 325 other outstanding club members from other counties in Illinois.

Those from Cook County who attended were: Bernilda Stuckey of the Sunshine 4-H Club of Tinley Park; Marguerite Rietveld of the Bloom 4-H Club of Chicago Heights; Norman Yunker, Orland Park and Robert Kolze of Bensenville.

The camp program was well planned, the theme being leadership. Each morning was devoted to a study of leadership, by having speakers, group discussions and panel discussions.

The afternoons were devoted to the development of interest and skill in various crafts and sports such as puppetry, bead lore, raffia, photography, story telling, music, ballroom dancing, tennis, baseball, horseshoe, swimming and boating.

The evening programs were of a more recreational type, always ending with singing and a serious "thought for the day." The evening programs consisted of movies, a costume party, a stunt night, a campfire meeting and a vesper service at which a minister spoke about the Nazi youth program, emphasizing how grand the United States is in comparison to other countries he had visited in Europe just before the war started. On the last night each person was given a candle and a human 4 leaf clover was formed.

The splendid cooperation of all the campers helped to make the camp extremely worthwhile and interesting.

Terry Pin's Tips on TIDINESS

By
FREDERIC A. BIRMINGHAM

A MAN should be as neat as a pin. Although it is going too far for him to spend all his time in a bureau drawer holding newly laundered shirts together.

A man's desk is the key to his character. If it is all in order, his wife has him buffaloed. There is nothing more pleasing to a housewife than for her to dust off a desk, put all the clips in that drawer that doesn't work, and pile all the papers so neatly it takes over a week to find a letter that came in yesterday.

Some wives do not even like their husbands to throw papers in the waste-basket, to any extent. There is no use in writing long letters to such husbands, because it hurts their digestion to chew and swallow so much paper.

Tidiness is a princely virtue. As for the princess, she can be as sloppy as she likes, as long as she's beautiful.

War Produces No Benefits

Billy Krieg

There is nothing but human misery left in the wake of every war, and there is no lasting benefits. The only result of one war is hatred, jealousy, ruin—and another war. It has no lasting benefits and each country that participates in the war is left with its resources depleted and in ruin. The homes of thousands are shambles and ruins. Hospitals are filled with the crippled and sick. Even the boys who were in the war and returned with sound bodies, have to start rebuilding their lives. In time the mothers and wives will get over the loss of their loved ones. Someone wins and someone loses in every war; so after the war, there is hatred of the victor by the defeated. There is hatred of those who destroyed the homes and loved ones. This hatred leads to thoughts of revenge, so another war is created by the last one. The cripples and the sorrow of the last war should show the futility of wars, but instead, these are the things that cause the hatred of the next war.

You say, "Look at the benefits in progress of science and mechanics that wars always produce." These are the things that will make the next war more efficient in murdering. It's the progress of these things made in peace time, that really makes them valuable to the world, even though they were invented during war time. Who ever heard of great medical and humanitarian progress in war time? Let's not build hatred—but advance in peace. LET'S SAVE THE AMERICAS FOR DEMOCRACY BY KEEPING WAR IN EUROPE AND OUR BOYS HERE TO PROTECT OUR DEMOCRACY.

Will Accept Farm Listings

Any person having farm land in Will County for sale may list it with the Farm security Administration office at the Farm Bureau Building, Joliet. This announcement was made by M. C. Geuther, Farm Security Administration Supervisor at Joliet, in discussing the Tenant Purchase program in the County.

"While Tenant Purchase loan applicants have the responsibility of finding farms for sale, The Farm Security Administration follows the practice of accepting listings of land for sale so as to aid applicants in selecting farms," he said.

He went on to explain that acceptance of listings does not mean the Farm Security Administration makes any commitments guaranteeing to find buyers. "Our only purpose is to assist, informally, in bringing possible sellers and buyers together," he said.

It was also pointed out that the selling price of farms purchased by Will County families under the Tenant Purchase program must be based on earning capacity of the farm. After an approved loan applicant has chosen a farm, appraisers investigate the farm and improvements, considering both productive value of farm and value and cost of repairs for improvements.

"The Farm Security Administration will not approve Tenant Purchase loans where price of the farm is so high as to prevent success of the venture, or to come within the speculative range," Geuther declared.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Lynn Morrow, beautiful blonde New York girl, is stranded in Palm Beach in her bathing suit with only 50 cents when her employer, Mrs. Helen Warren, disappears with car and trailer from a camp where she, Buddy, her son, and Lynn had been living. A note from Mrs. Warren advised Lynn to call at her New York attorney's office for her clothes and wages. She is rescued by Terry McNair, whom she met at the beach. She goes to his home, where he has a maid provide her with some of his sister's evening clothes. They then go to a beach club. His sister appears and a quarrel ensues. Lynn accepts the help of a stranger to escape. He takes her to his home where he identifies himself as Raymond (Wild) Austin. He accuses her of trying to black-mail him. Greatly incensed, Lynn flees. Stopping at a coffee shop, she meets a young artist, Rene Boucher, who is returning to New York by trailer and offers to take her there. They enjoy roughing it along the road. She finds Rene to be a decent sort of a fellow. Lynn tells Rene her story. He knows McNair and Austin as moneyed playboys. The car breaks down. They are forced to stay at the Lovell farmhouse during repairs, the Lovells believing them newlyweds. The Lovells discover they are not married and insist a marriage take place. There being no way out, Lynn and Rene agree. They decide their marriage is to be one in name only, with a divorce to follow. The wedding takes place. Their car repaired, they go on. Arriving in New York, they go to a trailer camp. Rene is taken ill. Lynn nurses him through. Their funds are gone. Lynn goes to see Mr. Mortimer, Mrs. Warren's attorney, who gives her a check for $200.

CHAPTER IX

Lynn stared at the check and then handed it back to Mr. Mortimer. "I can't take such a sum as this," she explained.

Mr. Mortimer smiled. "My dear young woman, the least Mrs. Warren could have done was to pay your fare back from Florida. I was shocked when I learned you were stranded down there. We were liable."

Just then the secretary came in with Lynn's big suitcase. Mortimer was silent while she was in the room: "I am deeply concerned over all this. If you will allow me, I am going to give you a card to a man I know, who, perhaps can give you a job."

Lynn's face lighted: "I'd be terribly grateful!"

He took one of his own cards and scribbled an address on the back of it. "Go there tomorrow. I think we can find work for you."

"I'm afraid I may not be able to do it tomorrow," Lynn said hesitating. Then she added with charming frankness: "You see how I'm dressed. I must get my clothes pressed, and get some shoes and things."

"Of course."

"Besides, I've hurt my ankle. I got into a little accident, an automobile accident on the way from Florida, and it is hard for me to walk yet."

"Then the first of the week will do." He pressed a button on his desk. "I am going to send you home in my car, Miss Morrow. Now, undoubtedly, you'll want to get that check cashed. Suppose I send my secretary with you to the bank across the street? She can arrange things there."

"I mustn't trouble you. I am afraid I made things very difficult for you."

Mortimer was watching Lynn intently. In spite of the awful clothes, the girl was a beauty. Mortimer nervously fingered some correspondence. He wondered. He must watch her. That would tell more. Then he indicated the interview was at an end. But as Lynn tried to thank him he held up his hand: "Thank Mrs. Warren. She's really responsible. And I'd be grateful if you'd not discuss this with anybody under any circumstances. And there is no need to tell anybody the sum Mrs. Warren sent you."

"I'll not discuss it with anybody!" Lynn promised.

As Lynn went down in the elevator with the secretary, Mortimer sent for his chauffeur and gave minute instructions. Fifteen minutes later Lynn was sitting in Mortimer's handsome black sedan whirling back home with $200 in her pocket. She kept pinching herself to see if she were really alive.

And all the time Lynn had been blaming Mrs. Warren. The girl was puzzled now.

Then she gave it up as too much for her.

As they got into the Bronx Lynn directed the chauffeur. Fifteen minutes and Lynn limped into the trailer home, radiant. The chauffeur brought in her suitcase over her protests, and to Rene's amazement.

When he had tipped his hat and closed the door, Lynn fell on her knees beside Rene and pulled the bills out of her pocket.

"The old homestead's saved! Rene, we're rich! We can eat, and everything! And I'm to have a job!" Rene was speechless at the sudden turn of events.

After supper, the girl dived into the suitcase. She had a brown suit and a topcoat of excellent cut. They had belonged to Mrs. Warren and she had given them to Lynn when they first started for Florida. Lynn had worn the suit down South, and the coat over a lightweight dress.

So enthused was Lynn at having a few of her belongings with her that she insisted on taking her suit and coat to the cleaners that night.

Two days later Lynn went downtown and got a new hat and gloves and a purse. She felt well-to-do and secure, and well-dressed, and the hat had not turned out badly.

Lynn's blonde hair gleamed from under the tiny off-the-face hat, and Rene thought she was the prettiest thing he had ever seen.

"You know, some day I want to do a decent portrait of you," he said, suddenly as though that thought just occurred to him. "Here I have before me one of the best models I've seen about these parts, and somehow I never thought of doing it, except for a garage man."

Lynn hurried off without any more discussion of the matter. The address Mortimer had given her was on Fifth Avenue. The girl had no idea what kind of a place it was, but she was to ask for Mr. Wallace. She walked over to Fifth Avenue from the subway with the card in her hand, and turned into the avenue, hunting for the number. There were several smart shops along the way, hats and shoes and frocks. Then a branch bank. Her number turned out to be the bank, and Lynn's heart sank. What could she do in a bank?

Lynn waited patiently outside Wallace's door for almost an hour. When she had completely despaired, a secretary motioned her into the room.

"Miss Morrow, eh?" The man behind the desk looked startled, as he saw Lynn standing there before him. "Can you type?" he asked after a long pause.

"Yes, sir."

Wallace nodded; nothing was said about salary. He told his secretary

"It's hard to work in this joint," Rene said irritably.

to take Lynn into the big office behind the cages.

A severe woman of 50 told her where to hang her hat and coat, and then began explaining her duties to her. Lynn's head swam. The thought of copying all those terrible figures appalled the girl. She was in a panic. She had to make good! She had to keep this job.

Just before closing time Wallace called the model of efficiency who so terrified Lynn and asked to have Miss Morrow come to his office.

Wallace was not alone. An elaborately coiffured woman in luxurious black was sitting across from him. "Oh, Miss Morrow, will you come in," Wallace smiled at her, and Lynn, so grateful for his courtesy, smiled back at him a tremulous smile.

"This is Mme. Reanoud, one of our good customers." Wallace let her stand there for a moment. Lynn bowed, and the two looked at the girl appraisingly.

"Walk over there to the window, Miss Morrow," Wallace said, "and now come back."

"Are you limping?" Mme. Reanoud spoke for the first time. She had a deep, almost masculine voice.

"I sprained my ankle a week ago; it is still a little troublesome."

"Nothing permanent?"

"Oh, no; it is much better."

Mme. Reanoud made a sign to Wallace, nodded her head.

"Let me explain why I asked you to come here," Wallace said.

A shadow settled on the girl's face.

"When I saw you this morning I was struck by your appearance," he went on, not seeming to notice her remark. "Then, Mme. Reanoud came in here and told me some of her troubles. She's one of our good customers. She has a dress shop, two shops down the street. She needs a model and I thought of you immediately."

"Have you ever done anything like that?" Mme. Reanoud was making mental notes of the girl's roughened hands. They'd have to be fixed up.

"No."

"That is odd; I should think you would have."

"I have been out of school but a short time. I did office work last Fall, and this Winter I was in Florida."

"You came back at a bad time."

Lynn merely smiled.

"Wouldn't you be interested? Do you like clothes?"

"I love them, but I haven't any."

"That's a good suit—excellent, in fact—"

"It is a hand-me-down," Lynn answered, truthfully.

Mme. Reanoud laughed. "I like your frankness. Come and work for me. I'll give you $18 a week to start, five days a week, and your clothes at wholesale."

"I won't be buying many clothes, I'm afraid."

"You will when you see mine!" She handed Lynn one of her business cards. "Report tomorrow at nine."

CHAPTER X

Lynn ran most of the way from the subway to the trailer camp to tell Rene about her good fortune. She burst into the trailer like a whirlwind to be met by howls from Rene.

"Close that door, damn it!" he shouted. "Do you want to ruin everything?"

Lynn stood still in the doorway in amazement. All over the walls, standing on the stove, on the sink, on sofas, on the floor were scores of sketches—all of a girl by the name of Lynn Morrow. There were sketches of Lynn in bathing suit, of Lynn walking, running, smiling over a cup of coffee. And Rene, begrimed, with rumpled hair was working away at his drawing board turning out more.

"Look! I've got an idea at last. You! Why I didn't realize before I don't know. I'll make my fortune yet!"

"What does it mean, Rene?"

"Just that I have the swellest model in New York, and haven't done anything about it. Now watch me go to town!" In a tumble of words as he worked Rene explained.

"You're a natural! I wanted to work and work at these sketches, to hold every line firmly. Then I'll start painting!" His eyes shone triumphantly. "I'll paint stuff that I can sell anywhere!" He threw down his pencil. "When do we eat and what? I haven't had anything all day."

Lynn frowned severely at him as she put up the gingham curtain, got out of her one decent outfit into the old overalls ready to cook supper. "Didn't you even drink any milk?" "Too busy!" he said shortly.

So engrossed was Rene in his own ideas that Lynn did not get a chance to tell him about her new job and her fabulous salary until at supper.

"Nonsense! That will do for a few weeks, but when I get going I'll want you to model all the time. You can't go to work then. If I only had decent quarters. It's hard to work in this joint!" he said irritably. Lynn was at work fifteen minutes early the next morning and had to wait until Madam got in.

It was almost 10 before Madam could devote a few minutes to Lynn. She called her into one of the unoccupied fitting rooms.

"Now, my dear, I've made an appointment at Selano's for you at 10:30. He'll cut your hair. You don't do it well. And he'll prescribe for your hands. If you must work at home, wear rubber gloves. Get back as soon as you can. This will be a busy day."

Lynn went obediently up the street to the hairdresser's. The rest of the day she kept getting in and out of clothes, parading before customers.

At 5 o'clock Madam called her again to another fitting room for a hurried conference.

"You've got a lot to learn, Lynn. You have a million-dollar smile. Use it, but only on the women. Didn't you see Glenda Royall walk out just now? Why, do you suppose? Because you were smiling too much at the old guy with her! Use your head! Smile, but at the fool women!"

"I didn't realize—" gasped Lynn.

"I know, but Glenda did!" Madam put her hand on Lynn's arm. "You're going to learn a lot in the next few weeks. Most of it won't be pleasant."

The days flew.

One Sunday morning in May, Lynn was cooking Sunday breakfast of bacon and eggs. The trailer was in a cloud of bacon smoke, for she'd burned the first slices a bit. Rene was grumbling at her carelessness, the smoke made his eyes smart.

"Hi, Boucher, are you there?" called a voice from the doorway.

"Come in."

A man stepped into the doorway, looming big in the little home.

Just then, in a resounding smack, a newcomer to the tourist camp backed smartly into Rene's trailer. Bang! Crack! Away went the bacon and eggs and the coffee pot, down to join up with the sketches and drawing board in a welter of grease and general confusion. Lynn was holding a burned hand.

"Oh, oh, how awful!" Lynn was on her knees trying to rescue the sketches. She hardly saw the newcomer in the doorway.

"That's it, that's it! Get to work, you fool. Get to work! I say!" The big man hopped and skipped over the floating drawings. "Rene, get to work! Sketch you fool, sketch! That's what I want!"

A great light broke over Rene's face. "Stay there, Lynn!" He grabbed up some paper from the couch, pulled a chair toward him for a drawing board and set to work.

Lynn sat back on her heels and just looked at the two mad men, as she nursed her blistered hands. As she started to rise, Rene cried: "Wipe up the mess. Stay where you are."

"My hand!"

"Damn your hand!" Rene was sketching furiously.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by
CARTER FIELD

Carter Field says Willkie must carry New York and Illinois, or break the Solid South . . . Unknown quantities may decide the presidential battle.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—This campaign will further twist the already ragged party lines in this country. "Cotton Ed" Smith and Edward R. Burke of Nebraska have already followed Al Smith, John W. Davis and Jim Reed who "walked" in 1936 and haven't come back. But it will take a powerful lot of walking to cut Roosevelt down to "size" when one remembers that 46 to 2 margin in 1936.

To have a chance to win, Willkie must carry New York and Illinois, or else break the Solid South. Even with New York and Illinois he must carry every other state north of the Mason and Dixon line and east of the Mississippi. And this includes Wisconsin.

E. R. Burke

The Solid South and border states have 149 electoral votes. If Roosevelt carries them, and also carries Illinois, West Virginia, New York, California, plus the three little states of Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico, and Washington, he will have 272 electoral votes, six more than enough to elect. On form, all the states mentioned are heavily Democratic. All went heavily Democratic in 1936, a year of sharp Republican gains. Note that this leaves out Montana, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Wyoming, Oregon and Idaho!

Willkie can carry every one of this last list, plus all New England and all the states from the Mississippi to the Atlantic north of Maryland and Kentucky, with the exception of Illinois and New York, and still lose!

SOUTH MUTTERS

The South is muttering against Roosevelt. There is no doubt of that. But it is not sound judgment to figure on any electoral votes there. So it boils down to this, that Willkie must carry New York or be defeated.

Meanwhile Roosevelt and the administration, with the strategic advantage so clearly with them, may be counted on to play as safely as possible. This means that from now until November, for example, no action by the government may be expected to upset the continued improvement in business due to huge armament orders—and expected orders. Roosevelt found this policy highly successful in 1936, when business was improving. There is no reason to vary it.

Both parties will continue to make war medicine—for ballots, not guns—in congress. The Republicans plan to keep it dragging along. They want to ride herd on the President, to create the impression that only their restraining influence will keep him from some overt act which would plunge us into war. But also they want to put the administration on record as resisting any changes in the various bureaus and agencies, notably the NLRB, which they insist are hampering business.

FEARED THIRD PARTY

President Roosevelt's scrapping—before the ink was dry—of the war issue plank in the Democratic platform he himself had dictated, clears the way for a campaign on purely domestic issues. The purpose of the weasel words—to prevent Burt Wheeler and Champ Clark from starting a third party—had been accomplished. Now the President stands on his record, just a little bit more belligerent toward Germany and Japan than Willkie, agreeing with him precisely on all possible legal aid to Britain, and four-square with the Republican nominee on increasing our national defense to the utmost.

ON DOMESTIC ISSUES

The lines of the campaign on domestic issues will be fairly simple. Willkie will insist that the present administration has demonstrated its inefficiency and extravagance, and hence cannot be trusted to produce the taxpayers' money's worth in spending billions on the army and navy. He will NOT attack the "social advances" and New Deal objectives for the benefit of the underdogs but insist that their administration should be intelligent, and particularly that there should not be barn burnings to get rid of rats.

Roosevelt and the New Dealers will harp on their accomplishments in social reform, and insist that to turn the government over to the "interests" would mean to wreck them. They will say that whatever Willkie's personal views, he will be as helpless as Harding and Hoover to prevent sordid Wall street-controlled throttling of the little business man, the consumers, and all the rest of it.

And they will ring the changes on the notion of a Wall street utility holding company executives in the White House.

Two Methods Of Fighting Constipation

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MANY persons think of the large bowel—colon—as always full of waste matter which must be removed immediately to prevent the poisons in the wastes being absorbed into the blood causing such symptoms as laziness, drowsiness, pains in joints, depressed spirits, and others.

As a matter of fact it is true that a "full" colon will cause the above symptoms partly because of poisons being absorbed into the blood, and also, as Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, has pointed out, because the very weight of this waste in colon may cause symptoms by pulling on the nerves in colon and its supporting structures.

However, nature never meant that these wastes should be vigorously pushed or flushed out by purgative medicines, because a colon (large bowel) that requires constant flushing out cannot remain a healthy bowel. The bowel was not meant to be completely empty. The healthy bowel is able to push wastes downward and out of the body by means of its muscles.

Nature gave man two methods of keeping the wastes moving down the large intestine—exercise, and rough or fibrous parts of the food.

Thus all the bending exercises, with knees kept straight, exercise or work on the outer abdominal muscles, which in turn massage the muscles of the large bowel and stimulate action. In addition, the exercise squeezes the liver which causes an extra flow of bile into the intestine, and, bile is nature's purgative.

'Roughage' Needed.

The fibrous foods, which not only rub against the nerve endings of large bowel and stimulate bowel action, also have something in them aside from the roughness, which stimulates the bowel. Thus the easily digested foods—meat, eggs, fat, sugar, and starches—do not leave enough rough or fibrous waste to stimulate bowel action so that foods with hard or fibrous waste in them—fruits, vegetables, and cereals—must be eaten to prevent constipation.

Nervous, high strung individuals, with a tendency to stomach or intestinal ulcer, must, of course, avoid these rough foods.

Poor Posture Cause Of Many Ailments

I SPEAK often of the benefits obtained by a good posture—sitting and standing with head erect, chest out and abdomen drawn in. This does not mean trying to attain the overerect position which is sometimes seen in military and other parades. This "forced" holding of the erect position not only spoils the appearance but is hard on nerves and muscles because of the tension maintained.

Two serious things happen to the body with the slouchy attitude. First, the stomach, intestines, and other abdominal organs fall forward or downward, thus interfering with the digestion of food and the removal of wastes from the lower bowel. Second, the lungs are crowded because of the falling forward of the shoulders preventing the lungs from getting the needed air.

One of the results of poor posture is its effects on certain joints, the ligaments around these joints and the muscles moving these joints.

That general weakness of the body causes the poor posture is true at times and in other cases there is some infection present which by getting into the joints of the spine (or elsewhere) causes the individual to assume some very bad positions (posture) such as stiff neck, poker back, severe limping or the flat-foot walk.

Strengthening the abdominal muscles which hold in the abdomen, the chest out, and the shoulders back is the first thought. Bending exercises with knees straight is the best single exercise.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Please recommend a method of diagnosing a tuberculous condition in a child of pre-school age.

A.—A common test is by use of tuberculin. Your physician can make the test.

Q.—Is Psoriasis curable? Is it contagious?

A.—Psoriasis is not contagious. The diet treatment is to avoid all fats—butter, cream, egg yolks, nuts, fat meat, pastry. Try it three or four weeks.

FROSTY FOODS FOR SUMMER

(Recipes Below)

When you're "eating out," and you wonder what to order for the grand finale of your meal, how often do you decide on a delicious sounding parfait? There's something very special about this tall, imposing and delectable dessert. And there really is no reason at all why having parfaits for dessert should be confined to our "eating out" days. A parfait may be a culinary creation, but with modern ice cream freezers, improved freezing in mechanical refrigerators and commercial mixes to help produce smooth, creamy, frozen desserts, there's no reason why you shouldn't serve them often at home!

Make a variety of ice creams and sherbets too, and serve them with cookies or dainty cakes. You'll find a grand assortment of cookie and cake recipes in my cookbook, "Better Baking,"—crisp cookies, chewy cookies, and light feathery cakes that are just the right accompaniment for foods and drinks that are cold and frosty.

Ice Cream Freezer Ice Cream.

(Makes 1 quart)

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup whipping cream

Scald milk, reserving ½ cup. Mix and blend the sugar, flour and salt and mix to a smooth paste with the cold milk which was reserved. Add this mixture to the scalded milk and cook, stirring constantly until thick, in a double boiler for 15 minutes. Add egg yolks (well beaten) and cook, stirring constantly, three minutes longer. Add vanilla and chill. Fold in whipping cream (whipped), place in ice cream freezer and freeze, using three parts ice to one part rock salt. This is a good standard recipe to use as a "pattern" for many tasty variations.

Chocolate Angel Parfait.

2 egg whites (beaten stiff)
½ cup sugar
½ cup water
1 square unsweetened chocolate (melted and slightly cooled)
1 cup cream (whipped)
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
¼ cup candied cherries (quartered)
¼ cup blanched almonds (chopped)

Beat egg whites stiff. Cook the sugar and water to the soft ball stage (234 degrees). Pour syrup in fine stream over egg whites, beating constantly. Continue beating until mixture is cool. Fold in melted chocolate, whipped cream, extract, nuts and cherries. Pour into trays and place in freezing section of mechanical refrigerator. Freeze. No stirring is necessary. Nuts and cherries may be omitted, if desired.

Mocha Freeze.

Make strong coffee in the usual manner, and pour over crushed ice to chill. Pour into tall glasses and add a generous spoonful of vanilla ice cream to each glass. Top with whipped cream.

Chocolate Mint Parfait.

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk (scalded)
3 eggs (beaten)
2 squares unsweetened chocolate (melted)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup whipping cream (whipped)

Blend sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add scalded milk slowly, stirring well, and place in saucepan or double boiler. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from heat; add beaten eggs; then cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Blend in melted chocolate. Cool. Then add vanilla extract and fold in whipped cream. Place in freezing container of modern ice cream freezer, and freeze, using 2 parts ice to 1 part rock salt. Serve in tall parfait glasses, alternating with layers of peppermint sauce. Top with whipped cream and a cherry. Peppermint sauce:

½ cup sugar
4 teaspoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup cold water
½ cup boiling water
¼ teaspoon peppermint extract
Few drops green coloring
¼ cup whipping cream (whipped)

Combine sugar, cornstarch, salt, and lemon juice. Mix with cold water to form a paste. Add hot water and cook, stirring constantly until thick and clear. Add flavoring and coloring, and chill. Just before serving, fold in whipped cream.

Lemon Sherbet.

(Serves 8)

1½ cups granulated sugar
1 quart water
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
¾ cup lemon juice
Yellow food coloring
2 egg whites
2 tablespoons powdered sugar

Combine granulated sugar and water and boil for 5 minutes. Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in the hot syrup. Cool. Add lemon juice and a few drops of yellow food coloring. Pour mixture into freezing container of ice cream freezer. Cover and surround with a mixture of chipped ice and salt (3 parts ice to 1 part salt, by volume). Freeze.

Lemon Iceberg.

To each glass of lemonade, add a scoop of lemon sherbet. Garnish with mint and a fresh strawberry or raspberry. Slip a lemon slice over the edge of each glass.

Iced Chocolate.

(Makes 4 large glasses)

4 tablespoons sugar
4 tablespoons cocoa
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup boiling water
2 cups milk (scalded)
½ teaspoon vanilla
Crushed ice
Whipped cream

Combine sugar, cocoa and salt. Add boiling water and cook for two minutes. Remove from fire, and combine with the scalded milk. Pour into glasses filled with crushed ice, and serve with a spoonful of whipped cream garnishing each glass.

Summer Salads.

Next week Eleanor Howe will give you some of her choicest tested recipes for cool, refreshing summer salads and things to serve with them. There'll be recipes for jellied salads, vegetable salads, party salads and "leftover" salads, too. Be sure to watch for Eleanor Howe's column next week!

Whispered Secrets

As everyone is pleased with imagining that he knows something not yet commonly divulged, secret history easily gains credit; but it is for the most part believed only while it circulates in whispers, and when once it is openly told, is openly refuted.—Dr. Johnson.

TEMPTING HEALTH AIDS!

Oranges give you refreshment—plus vitamins you need!

Nothing else is so delicious and so good for you as oranges!

They give you vitamins and minerals needed for the best of health. Fully half our families get too little of these essentials, says the Department of Agriculture!

So make oranges your family's summer refreshment. Peel and eat them. Keep a big pitcher of fresh orangeade handy. Or better yet—

Have 8-ounce glasses of fresh orange juice for breakfast daily. This gives you all the vitamin C you normally need each day. Adds vitamins A, B₁, and G and minerals calcium, phosphorus and iron.

Sunkist is sending you the pick of California's wonderfully juicy oranges. Buy a supply next time you shop.

HIGH PRICES

Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.
